Global Tax Governance

ISBN: 9781785521263

Peter Dietsch and Thomas Rixen

‘Tax specialists may think they have little to learn from a book on global tax governance, especially one that concludes that the best solution is to create a new International Tax Organisation (ITO). They would be wrong. Anyone concerned with international taxation will benefit from this excellent collection of essays about the nature and possible resolutions of the conflicts within and between states about fiscal sovereignty, tax competition, and domestic and international equity that underlie the international tax discussion. The authors do not always agree with each other and few readers are likely to agree with all of them. But this book makes clear what is really at issue in this discussion and shows why even the recent prodigious efforts of the OECD-G20 BEPS group are most unlikely to produce any lasting solutions. For nation-states and economic globalisation to coexist, something like an ITO may indeed prove necessary.’

Richard Bird, University of Toronto

Decision-Making under Ambiguity and Time Constraints

ISBN: 9781785521256

Reimut Zohlnhöfer and Friedbert W. Rüb

‘Associated with the work of US political scientist John W. Kingdon, for more than three decades, the Multiple-Streams Framework has informed the work of numerous policy scholars from all over the world. Featuring an excellent line-up comprised of well-known and more junior contributors, this edited volume offers a timely overview of key comparative, empirical-methodological, and theoretical issues raised by the Multiple-Streams Framework. This coherent book will interest the many policy scholars who draw on this now classic Framework.’

New Perspectives on Negative Campaigning

ISBN: 9781785521287

Alessandro Nai and Annemarie Walter

‘The study of negative campaigning has mostly been about American elections. Refreshingly, the essays in this book look at what happens in other countries. By so doing, they truly offer new perspectives and thus advance our understanding of attack politics. Recommended to anyone interested in elections and campaigns.’ John G Geer, Vanderbilt University
